About the New Band Master.

In view of the fact that some of our people have been wondering who the new bandmaster is and where he comes from, we publish a clipping from the Portage Register, which was published at the time Mr. Bliss went to Marshfield to direct the Second Regiment band at that place:

Prof. F. L. Bliss of this city has been chosen director of the Second Regiment band and will leave Portage for Marshfield about April 1st to assume his new position.
Prof. Bliss was elected director by a unanimous vote of the band Wednesday evening, and a letter from Fred W. Kohl, manager, received last evening, notified Mr. Bliss of his selection. Numerous professional musicians and country went to Marshfield on trial to direct the band, among them being Mr. Bliss, and the selection of the Portage man is fitting testimonial to his ability. The Marshfield organization should be congratulated for their wise selection, as there are few musicians that can compete with Mr. Bliss as a cornetist and director.

He was born in Canada in 1870, and began to practice music at the age of 7 years. When 10 years of age he came to Portage and at the age of 13 he formed among his schoolmates the "Portage Juvenile band" which at the time obtained considerable renown, and with this organization began his career as a director. Mr. Bliss was solo cornetist with Dana's Third Regiment band for five years, while the organization had its headquarters in Waupun. When the March band was organized seven years ago, he assumed directorship, and from practically "green" material he has developed a band that today is second to none in this state, the band having played at the Milwaukee carnival for three consecutive years, and was regarded in the highest esteem though only 35 years of age. His record as director and cornetist is well known by all whom he has come in contact with. There are but three regimental bands in the state, and to have a Portage man selected as director of one of these, is quite worthy of mention.

The Beacon Lights Club.

At last, in the organization of The Beacon Lights Club, Grand Rapids can claim one society with its membership equally divided between ladies and gentlemen.
Their first social evening was spent at the home of Prof. and Mrs. I. O. Hubbard, when they were royally entertained Thursday, Dec. 6th.

The ladies met in the afternoon and when business hours were over for the gentlemen they came to partake of a six o'clock dinner when the following menu was served:

Scalloped Potatoes
Cold Veal Loaf
Roast Venison
Butter Sandwiches
Waldorf Salad
Sweet Pickles
Currant Jelly
Coffee
Salted Nuts
Mints.

After dinner the gentlemen were asked to write in rhyme their opinion of The Beacon Lights Club, which they did in glowing terms if not in faultless metre.

The ladies voted for the poem each considered best and the prize was awarded to Will Raymond who proved himself a poet of no mean ability. This was followed by a peanut race which resulted in oceans of fun and a tie between Prof. Hubbard and Dr. Clark but which was finally won by the host of the evening.

Mr. Melchert then sang a solo followed by one by Mrs. Purnell, both of which were greatly enjoyed by all present.

At an early hour the Club adjourned already looking forward to the January meeting.

THE CHICKEN SHOW.

First Exhibition of the Grand Rapids Poultry Association a Great Success.

The success of the first exhibition of the Grand Rapids Poultry and Poultry Stock association was so much better than was expected could be done here that it was a surprise to both the members of the association as well to outsiders. The members expected that they would have to make some excuses for their first show on account of the short time that they had in getting up the affair and on account of the fact that nothing of the kind had ever been held here before, but no excuses were necessary. There were about eighty couples of chickens displayed and those who visited the exhibition were agreeably surprised by what they saw there. It was certainly a revelation to find that so much nice poultry was being raised in this immediate vicinity, and there is no question but what the holding of the exhibition will be a great stimulus to the industry here. During the three days of the exhibition there were over a thousand visitors to the place, which speaks well for the interest taken in the affair by the community at large. Prof. F. L. Bliss, who has taken charge of the local band, has been making arrangements during the past few days to put on a home talent play in this city in the near future. Mr. Bliss has had a great deal of experience as an actor on the road as well as a musical director, and is well qualified to take charge of a matter of this kind. The play will be "A Noble Outcast," a drama in four acts, and is a strong production and one that will no doubt prove very acceptable to our people. Several members of the cast have already been secured, and it is expected that the rounds will be rounded up and the rehearsals commenced this week.

On account of the pure food law passed at the last session of congress Sears Roebuck & Company have decided to discontinue handling groceries. TERRIBLE REVENGE CHARGED AGAINST JEALOUS HUSBAND

Angered by Wife's Friendship for Crippled Man, J. H. Crutchfield Is Accused of Attempting to Maim Her.

TRAGEDY HAS SHOCKED ATLANTA, GA.

Both Principals Belonged to the Best Society of the Southern City —Mrs. Crutchfield Long Considered One of the Most Beautiful Women of That Section—Public Sentiment Entirely With Her.

Atlanta, "Evening" This morning, the body of a woman, Mrs. J. H. Crutchfield, was found in the city morgue, the result of a gunshot wound to the head.

His wife fell, and he dropped the revolver to the ground. He then turned to the woman and fired the shot which killed her.

"That man" knew his wife and "that man" had lost his leg in a railway accident. Further than that, it was known to the public that Mrs. Crutchfield was a beautiful woman, and that she was a member of the best society in Atlanta.

The Crutchfields have long been among the best known people in Atlanta, Ga. It had to be in the case of Mrs. Crutchfield, who was a beautiful woman, and a member of the best society in Atlanta.

It was a rising young cotton broker, today he is accounted well-to-do. Crutchfield did not know of a wealthy family—in fact, her father was all the fortune she brought her husband, but that was enough.

There has never been a better dressed young man in all the south than young Mrs. Crutchfield. She had a figure and complexion to put off her beauty, too, and the beautiful clothes bought by her devoted husband. It was dinner and dance and drive all the time.

"There goes the handsome Mrs. Crutchfield!" could be heard in Atlanta any day.

Made Crutchfield Jealous. The childless couple liked to hear her called that, because she really was. But Crutchfield resented this compliment to his beautiful wife. He didn't like the drives and the dinners and the dances. He had an idea that his wife should stay at home more and look out for Louella and Paul, their two little boys. Mrs. Crutchfield could not see this in his light.

They quarreled; they separated. Then Atlanta society learned for the first time that everything in the Crutchfield home was not as it should be.

Entered "The Man." Mrs. Crutchfield took her two little sons and went to live at No. 200 South Street, Atlanta. It was then that "the man" entered their lives. He was a splendid specimen of mankind—tall, good-looking, athletic, debonair. He was clever and entertaining and the handsome young Mrs. Crutchfield was plausibly interested—more than that, not at all.

This friend of the family was a railroad man. He fell between the cars and both his legs had to be amputated to save his life. Mrs. Crutchfield was deeply moved by his misfortune and she tried to help him as he lay in the hospital, deemed to be a cripple for life.

And that aroused the husband to his fury. Mrs. Crutchfield had been to see "Zaza" at the matinee. Her husband had come to her new home to wait for her. He had to wait two hours. Then he saw her with the "other man" and he was angry.

"Is that you, Sal?" asked Crutchfield. "Yes," answered his wife, without a thought of what was to come. The handsome young wife fell prone and unconscious. Two bullets from tending to his own business as a cotton oil broker. Meanwhile the wife that he had married was fighting for her life at the Grady hospital. Crutchfield had set in for life hanging in the balance. The surgeons shook their heads. It was a toss-up whether the wounded woman would live or die.

Public sentiment was with the wife. So Crutchfield's privileges were cut. He was sent to jail—the "Towson" jail. And even here he was not looked in a cell, and there is likelihood of a police investigation as to why he was not.

Instead, Crutchfield was assigned to a sunny room. He has fitted it up as a combination library and sitting-room. This man who had his wife fall—the "Towson" jail. And even here he was not looked in a cell, and there is likelihood of a police investigation as to why he was not.

"Rather suggestive, eh?" is the salutation given to callers when they enter while this song is being played, and the usual salutation to another tune, "A Lookin' Out."

Plays Suggestive Tune. The latest of his collection has just arrived. It is from "The Spring Chicken" and is entitled "They Sold Me a Lemon in the Garden of Love. Where They Told Me the Peaches Grow."

The climax came the other day when the surgeons said that Mrs. Crutchfield would get well, and that her husband could apply for bail. He at once decided to celebrate.

"Call up the best caterer in town," he ordered of his jailer. "Have a 'possum supper, and plenty of ale and cider."

They had it in the jail all right. The news of the feast to come was published in the afternoon papers, and two women admirers of the man who had his "vengeance" sent his frosty cakes as an addition to the feast.

When supper time came a large table was brought into Crutchfield's cell, and the prisoners and several outsiders filed in for the fun and frolic. The man who had his vengeance sent his frosty cakes as an addition to the feast.

Dr. O. H. Snyder, charged with selling liquor on Sunday, was the first guest to arrive. He was followed by Ernest Naylor, charged with being a participant in her husband's crime had hit her in the right leg. "I wanted to hit you once in each leg," yelled Crutchfield. "Then you would have been like that man."

He was right. So she would have been. "You have published an account of my divorce proceedings. It was all right and all wrong. We have made up. There is nothing in these charges—nothing."

Under the law there is what is known as a peace warrant. Crutchward the middle of the fifteenth century, by Vander Borg, a Flemish merchant, stranded by accident on one of the islands. Lisbon fitted out an expedition and took possession of them.

Under the rule of Pombal, a wise Portuguese minister, the Azores became a place of refuge for a people who had been persecuted in Portugal. But that happy time did not last long. The islanders were forbidden to trade, except with Portugal, and the western isles gradually sunk into sullen stolid under the rule of "bigoted ecclesiastics."

A time, however, when the Azorean wine and oranges and the magnificent wood were allowed to pass freely to England and America. Since then the Azores have been re-created.

Love and Mathematics. A Parisian manuscript exists which, it is said, reads one way as a letter, and another way as a treatise on mathematics. The eager lover read in the lines hope and courage, while the rejected one found, if not consolation, at least distraction, in his despair.

both limbs. But by a merciful misadventure, the bullet which was to have killed him, struck his leg.

The 11-year-old boy, Louella, heard the shot. He started down the stairs, and when he saw his father firing, he jumped on the back of his father's head, and with his hands on his father's shoulders, he fought with him to keep him from firing again.

Crutchfield started to get away. The boy clung to him. "Don't you stop again!" screamed little Louella, trying to get between the father and his mother.

The boy couldn't save his mother's limb, but he did save her life by pulling her father's arm. Crutchfield ran down the steps.

"If you follow me I'll fix you, too!" he yelled, in his rage. "I was afraid," said the boy, as he tells it now, "and I ran back to my mother. I saw him hit her once before and I tried to stop him this time."

Crutchfield was arrested at once and hurried to the police station. Detective Lochart was called: "I had the gun in my hand and she grabbed it at it. In the scuffle it went off and shot her in the leg. It is a repeating Winchester, and the explosion of one cartridge loaded it again and this caused the second shot."

"I went to my home to look for the man who had ruined it. I did not mean to shoot Salie, and I hope she will get well."

Over at the hospital Mrs. Crutchfield said: "It was not an accident, and if they don't lock him up he will finish the job if he ever meets me again."

Gave Crutchfield Privileges. And here is the strange part of the whole episode. Crutchfield was not treated like the ordinary criminal. In fact, he had the liberty of the city. He was not locked in a cell, but was permitted to engage a special policeman at his own expense to accompany him about town, "baying" for his friends in the clubs and cafes, and at

of his plight, called at his jail room, attended to the business under consideration and remained to enjoy the supper with their host.

One "Turned Down" Plate. Crutchfield made the ninth member of the party, and insisted on "turning down" an empty plate. Whether this was a tribute to his wife or some visitor who did not arrive is not known.

While the revelry was at its height Mrs. Crutchfield was moaning on her couch in the hospital. She will soon be out now, crippled for life. Crutchfield was asked if he had not intended to cripple her in exactly the way he did.

"No," said he, "I didn't. I never said that, but I do know a friend who has lost both his legs. You just call on the hospital where they look him and see if she didn't go there and nurse him when he was hurt."

And that is where this case of latter-day revenge stands now. There will be two trials—a criminal one for felonious assault and another for divorce. Much that will startle will be brought out then.

But, no matter who wins or loses, all Atlanta is saying, "What a vengeance!"

SURELY WAS A MEAN MAN. In Presence of Hospitable Friends He Bought and Drank Alone.

"The meanest man I ever knew lived down in Texas and I worked for him," said the old-time reporter. "He owned the paper and he dropped into a saloon on top of that he had real estate strong around town till reporters on the opposition didn't know when they were trespassing and when they weren't."

"One afternoon, as we boys were starting out to gather up the day's troubles and had dropped into a friend's place to take the taste out of our mouths the city editor and the managing editor came in right after us and we all lined up. There had been one round and everybody was trying to tell his best story and wondering who would buy next."

There was a gasp from "Older" Herlick, who had just pulled out. He loved his glass to the front door. Who would be coming in all alone but the old man himself—and him a deacon! Nobody had ever heard of him being in a saloon before and it didn't seem to bode much good.

The m. e. was the first man to get his breath, as was right, seeing his position, and he began to talk to the old man, and then to the city editor, and then to all of us, and he sang out tolerably cheerfully:

"How do you do, Mr. Campbell. We were just about to take something. Will you join us?"

"The old man sidled up to the bar without saying a word, much to our astonishment, though you could see he wasn't used to it."

"I believe I'll take a little beer," he said, and we nearly fell over. "What an unbending!"

"Well, we all took what we wanted and the old man sipped his beer and snatched his lips. There was more conversation while the old man sipped the rosewater, and finally the old man spoke up again, smacking his lips."

"That beer tasted pretty good. I believe I'll have another."

"And with that he laid a nickel very carefully on the bar and gave his little snort. One lone, lone nickel. We glanced at each other, nothing. The old man drank his beer slowly. We? Why, we looked on."

Beautiful Spanish Women. What women are more adorable than those of Spain, so proud, so simple, so radiantly feminine? asks a writer in Petit Parisien. As a type, the Spanish woman of the south is unique. She is small and slender, exquisitely proportioned, with tiny but beautifully shaped hands and feet.

Her face is oval, finely chiseled, fresh and glowing. Her eyes are the mirror of her soul, dark, lustrous, pensive and passionate. Her grace of carriage and deportment is the glory of her race.

Wireless Telegraph Plant Operated by Boys

In Newport, R. I., are two wireless telegraph plants owned and operated by boys, which are perhaps the most complete amateur plants in the country. They belong to Lloyd Manue, who has his plant at his home on Third street, and Henry Rooney, whose apparatus is situated on Mt. Vernon street.

Both boys receive and send messages, but are particularly busy in receiving the many messages that are sent to the wireless station at the naval torpedo station. At times the operators at the torpedo station talk with the boy operators at Newport.

The length of the wave is regulated with this apparatus by moving the chips in either an upward or downward direction. After ascertaining precisely the right position for a certain station, it is an easy matter to keep this in mind, and no further trouble is experienced. Though other stations than the one they are calling may receive the message, it is heard most distinctly by the station to which the apparatus is adjusted.

The greatest improvement over the earlier instrument is in the wave detector. Two pieces of carbon, with an ordinary needle placed across them, was the way in which the first detector was made. Now the boys use an electro-lytic receiver. This consists of a half liter platinum wire, which is partly contained in a receptacle containing acid, to which it is fastened by means of a screw adjustment. Another tuning coil is used, similar to the one used in sending, but in this coil there are more turns of wire. A sliding contact is employed, and in this manner any part of the coil can be used.

A receiver, attached to the head, similar to the ones used by telephone operators, is used. The sliding contact is then moved up and down until the apparatus responds.

The general aim of the experimenters in the field of wireless telegraphy at the present time is to discover a selective system of transmitting messages. This is a system whereby it will be possible to transmit messages from one point to another without outside stations being able to interfere or "butt in."

This latter is now the greatest defect in wireless telegraphing, as other stations than the one intended get the message. Of course, these may not understand the message if it is sent in a code, but they are able to bother the sender and receiver to a greater or less extent.

Manuel and Rooney spend practically all their spare time working and experimenting with their outfit, and have made several improvements and additions to their first rather crude apparatus.

In the part of the apparatus which is used for sending messages, a condenser (a tuning coil) are used. This is a brass wire connected with the aerial and to the instrument itself by means of leads or clips, which are

FAMOUS PARIS BEEHIVE.

PLACE WHERE ARTISTS FIND A CHEERFUL REFUGE.

Home Which Was Formed and Has Flourished Under Patronage of Boucher, the Sculptor.

The Paris philanthropy known as the Beehive is situated in a quiet suburban near the gate of Versailles. There is nothing particularly attractive about the neighborhood; but here for six years have lived more than 30 artists, painters, sculptors, designers and musicians, grouped under the benevolent patronage of Alfred Boucher, a master of contemporary sculpture, and the founder of the Beehive.

In the insect kingdom, the bees while busy with their own tasks are interested in those of all the others. They hasten to the common abode bringing their booty, and before long the delicious and odorous honey appears to show how conscientious, minute but continuous, are effective in producing a solid return, useful to all and profitable to each.

The Beehive had its foundation in a philanthropic idea concerning artistic solidarity; one of those generous impulses which do so much to soften the asperities of life of struggle. Before achieving celebrity Alfred Boucher, like other artists without fortune, was obliged to undergo perpetual effort, not only to produce the beautiful and powerful works he was conceiving, but to obtain the right to live.

After achieving success Boucher, if not arrived at the summit, had at least attained a position which, in any circumstances, and while others more selfish would only have thought of enjoying a position acquired by dint of desperately hard work, Alfred Boucher resolved to devote his earnings to the erection of a large dwelling where a number of young artists without means could find for a modest sum—only $30 a year!—not alone a comfortable abode, but a study hall of the most favorable description, specially designed for night work, with gratuitous living models.

From five to seven p. m. the bees were in common in the study hall. While the model takes and keeps the attitude on the pedestal placed in the center, the painter with his canvas, the sculptor with his mount, each to his task, tastes art and pure art. The true example of union in the work which the real bees offer to the humankind is fully appreciated by the members of the Beehive. They throw off the anxieties brought on by the necessities of modern existence, for in order to procure the wherewithal to live the bees are obliged to devote themselves to utilitarian labors.

It is to spare young artists of needless means the thousand and one difficulties of the start, to assist them to practice their art, that Boucher thought of offering them the shelter of a room, or rather a "caveau" where the working bee can quietly produce his honey of art and beauty. By its structural form the Beehive recalls the habitation of the different little workers. With its battlements, roof, towers, it gives the character of a big bell, the principal part of the establishment. On all sides are doors leading to the comb, and all these combs are occupied by young persons having their dreams and their ambitions, and with every desire at their command, necessary for triumph on the canvas or to model in the mold clay the theory of their conceptions.

That New Battery.

A news item has been going the rounds of the press about a new battery that has been invented by the Ford & Co. man that is going to revolutionize the electrical world to such an extent that the machinery now in existence for the production of electricity won't even be salable as scrap. The new battery which some have designated as a "storage" and others as a "primary," and still others as a "storage primary," is going to produce electricity at one-tenth the cost as by the present system, and locomotives and street cars and automobiles and bulky places are going to be fitted out with one of the things and motive power will be so cheap that it will cost less to travel than it will to stay in one place and pay house rent. We are not from Missouri, but we spent our winter down in that country and they will have to "show us" before they get us to believe more than one-half that has been said about the new battery. We hope it is all true, and that we can heat our home with one of the new batteries at a cost of about ten cents a year. Wouldn't it put a kink in the backbone of the man who has been selling us condenser at six dollars a rod and telling us with tones in his eyes that it was impossible to get it at this price. What will John D. Rockefeller do with his surplus gasoline when we get our autos fitted out with the new battery and are able to run it two hundred years at an outlay of only fifteen cents. Just imagine poor old John with his digestive apparatus out of order and his fortune cut down to a paltry fifty millions a year, for the new battery will furnish light at half a cent a kilowatt, which will make a co-operative electric plant look like a last year's bird's nest, and John will have to get out and work for a living or else get out from the country. But then of course it may be some little time yet before we are able to procure one of the new batteries.

Merchants Reform.

At the meeting of the merchants' association at Wausau recently there were some resolutions passed which, if followed up, should prove of benefit to all concerned. One was to do away with the trading stamp graft and the other not to take any advertising space in programs, circulars and other things of that sort. Our local merchants have just then the trading stamp mania and have sworn off forevermore. They found that the only fellow who made anything out of the deal was the man who got them into it, and that it did not benefit themselves or their customers in the least. They have yet to learn about the program advertising. It would seem however that it would not take them long to find out all about this. The average program has a circulation of from three to five hundred, and the merchant pays from two to five dollars for a space on it. For the same money he could get several times the amount of space in one of the local papers and get a circulation many times as large. It does not take much of a mathematician to figure out which is the best proposition, and still they continue to bite when the occasion offers.

The short session of congress, which is now convened, promises to be one that the people will remember if the signs of the times are read right. The city of Washington is filled up with paid lobbyists of the steel trust and other corporations who are trying to get their hands into the public treasury. The ship subsidy measure which is one of the biggest grafts that has come up in some time stands a good show of being passed at this short session. President Roosevelt, who has been credited with being opposed to trusts, is said to favor this measure and he is backed by the leaders of the republican party who have always been able to reduce the nation's surplus by voting to put the people's money in the pockets of corporations. Millions of dollars will be given to the steamship companies, in the name of patriotism, and what can the people do but grin and bear it.—Chilton Times.

Two years from now, if the present development of public sentiment continues, the republican party will have the fight of its life to retain control at Washington. The people of the country are now beginning to realize, that most of the ills from which the country is at present suffering, are the results of republican class legislation of one sort or another, and that it will be able to depend upon the democratic party to correct the ills, than the party that has been responsible for them.—Prairie du Chien Courier.

How to Save
FUEL
Briefly—Buy a
Cole's Hot Blast Coal Stove

It cuts the fuel bill in two because it burns the gas arising via the chimney into other stoves.

$3.00 soft coal work like $9.00 hard coal. Come in and see

Good old times are an illusion and a snare, and a man who sighs for them has little conception of what they were. Return to them, would you? Then rise on a cold morning and wash at the pump, put on a pair of rawhide boots that rival a tin can in stiffness, sit down to a bare meal with your two-legged stool dancing around on a split slab floor; eat corn pone and bacon for a steady diet, and labor fourteen hours out of twenty-four. Go without a local paper, a fly screen, a mosquito bar, a spring mattress, kerosene lamp, see how your oxen to a market and sit on the floor of an oxcart as you wend your way to church or a frolic. Parch corn and peas for coffee, and sassafras for tea and see how you like it.

That New Battery.

A news item has been going the rounds of the press about a new battery that has been invented by a Pond du Lac man that is going to revolutionize the electrical world with an extent that the machinery now in existence for the production of electricity won't even be salable as scrap. The new battery which some have designated as a "storage" and others as a "primary" and still others as a "storage primary," is going to produce electricity at one-tenth the cost as by the present system, and locomotives and street cars and automobiles and all other things that are run by electricity are going to be fitted out with one of these and motive power will be so cheap that it will cost less to travel than it will to stay in one place and pay house rent. We are not from Missouri, but we spent our winter down in that country and they will have to "show us" before they get us to believe more than one-half that has been said about the new battery. We hope it is all true and that we can heat our homes with one of the new batteries at a cost of about ten cents a year. Wouldn't it put a tank in the whiskers of the man who has been selling us cordwood at six dollars a cord and telling us with tears in his eyes that it was impossible to get it at this price. What will John D. Rockefeller do with his surplus gasoline when we get our autos fitted out with the new battery and are able to run it two hundred years at an outlay of only fifteen cents. Just imagine poor old John with his huge apparatus out of order and his fortune cut down to a paltry fifty millions a year, for the new battery will furnish light at half a cent a kilowatt, which rate will make a co-operative electric plant look like a last year's bird's nest, and John will have either to get out and work for a living or else get out of the country. But then of course it may be some little time yet before we are able to procure one of the new batteries.

Merchants Reform.

At the meeting of the merchants' association at Wausau recently there were some resolutions passed which, if followed up, should prove of benefit to all concerned. One was to do away with the trading stamp graft and the other was to take away advertising space in programs, circulars and other things of that sort.

Our local merchants have just turned the trading stamp mania and have sworn off forevermore. They found that the only fellow who made anything out of the deal was the man who got them into it, and that it did not benefit themselves or their customers in the least. They have yet to learn about the program advertising. It would seem however that it would not take them long to find out all about this. The average program has a circulation of from three to five hundred, and the merchant pays from two to five dollars for a space on it. For the same money he could get several times the amount of space in one of the local papers and get a circulation many times as large. It does not take much of a mathematician to figure out which is the best proposition, and still they continue to bite when the occasion offers.

The short session of congress, which is now convened, will be one of the people who will remember if the signs of the times are read right. The city of Washington is filled up with paid lobbyists of the steel trust and other corporations who are trying to get their hand into the public treasury. The ship subsidy measure which is one of the biggest grafts that has come up in some time stands a good show of being passed at this short session. President Roosevelt, who has been credited with being opposed to trusts, is said to favor the measure and is backed by the leaders of the republican party who have always been able to reduce the nation's surplus by voting to put the people's money in the pockets of corporations. Millions of dollars will be given to the steamship companies in the name of patriotism, and what can the people do but grin and bear it.—Chilton Times.

Two years from now, if the present development of public sentiment continues, the republican party will have the fight of its life to retain control at Washington. The people of the country are now beginning to realize that most of the bills from which the country is at present suffering, are the results of republicanism, and that if one of our senators, and that it will be safer to depend upon the democratic party to correct the ills, than the party that has been responsible for them.—Prairie du Chien Courier.

Passed Examination Successfully. James Donahue, New Britain, Conn. writes: "I tried several kidney remedies, and was treated by our best physicians for diabetes, but did not improve until I took Foley's Kidney Cure. After the second bottle I showed improvement, and five bottles cured me completely. I have since passed a rigid examination for life insurance. Foley's Kidney Cure cures backache and all forms of kidney and bladder trouble. Daily Drug & Jewelry Co.

DROVE SLEEP AWAY
D. D. D. Company, Chicago, Ill.
Gentlemen—Used five bottles of D. D. D. for Eczematous eruption. Suffered intense pain. Consulted physicians without avail.
Could not sleep nights. After one application of D. D. D. I feel better. I have used five bottles and am now entirely cured.
I will heartily recommend D. D. D. to anyone suffering from skin diseases.
(Signed) E. B. MARSH,
1221 Cass St., La Crosse, Wis.

WHAT MORE NEED WE SAY? So many astonishing cures have been effected by D. D. D.
Prescription—right among the people we personally know, your own neighbors, perhaps —that it is astonishing that anyone should continue to suffer with Eczema, Psoriasis or any other Skin Disease. Call at our store and we will give you the names of chronic sufferers now cured, and show you hundreds and hundreds of letters.
If all sufferers only knew how D. D. D. cures Skin Diseases, how it gives relief from that scouring itch the instant the remedy strikes the injured skin, (if you only know) you would be glad to spend $1.00 on one bottle of D. D. D.
Prescription and get that wonderful, refreshing relief.
But to overcome all doubts first we have arophthalmic disease is on its increase in the western part of the State from the fact that the disease from the hydrophobia of the milk-cow has been found by Alexander Miller, a wealthy man, and six at the farm of Joseph K. Ketchum. All stages appear in the neighborhood of the head and neck of the animal, and the disease begins with their becoming weak and their milk gradually dries up. The disease grew out of a dog having been being seized with rabies and then a cow, while some of the others were away at the State Fair, and the disease finally attacked as well as a number of its cows as well as some of his and had associated with it by bitten other dogs in the farm. When seized with the malady does not last long. The Deposits have increased over $1,000,000 in the weeks between the two reports, and only difficulty in the situation now is to be that the bankers have no surplus of funds to loan. It is now planned to find enough good security upon which to loan it and a large increase in the amount of loan would be the result.

BEELL BEATS BIG GOTCH TO GOAL

Winning the Wrestling Champion ship in a Desperate Struggle

Gotch Showed Superior Skill in the First Bout but after that Condition Told and the Giant was Laid Low with all his Strength—Friends Loving a Fortune.

The Daily Picayune.

Freel Beell, known as the Wisconsin whirlwind, became the American champion wrestler last night when he threw Frank Gotch in the greatest battle ever witnessed in this city.

Gotch captured the first fall in 21 minutes and 22 seconds, and the hotting, which had been lively at even money, was run up to 2 to 1. Then Beell played a waiting game and simply wore down Gotch, who was not in the best of shape, until he had absolutely no grip at all. Then he resorted to rough tactics, slamming the man on the mat hard, and after four of these vicious blows Gotch was limp and Beell had no difficulty in turning him over. The fall took 29 minutes and 8 seconds.

After that it was Beell's battle without the slightest effort. Gotch was picked up, portly limp, and carried to his dressing-room, but the 29 minutes' rest allowed him to recover, and Beell won the third fall and the American championship in 50 seconds.

The backers of Beell were perfectly confident throughout the entire battle.

They backed Beell in Jack Sheehan's book at the track, good and heavy all the afternoon, at 8 to 5, and around the theatre there was plenty of Beell money at even money.

These offers of even money were so plentiful that many of the friends and admirers of Gotch thought there was something queer and would not wager. After the first fall the price went up a little on the champion, but there were still takers at even money and 2 to 1.

Manager Quinn, who looks after Beell, let out of the way for the want of more ready cash. He took everything in sight as long as his fall lasted, and then asked for time until he could raise more money.

An offer of $700 even was offered just before the match started, but there was only $200 of Beell money handy, and the Gotch following did not want to take that.

When the man came on the mat Gotch was dressed in black tights and green trunks, and looked a giant alongside of Beell. But Gotch did not look in the pink of training, although he started upon his arrival here that he was never in better shape in his life and felt better. Beell came in a little later and stripped in his garnet tights, leather-padded about the knees. He seemed a man in size alongside the giant. Gotch claims to have weighed exactly 282 pounds, while Beell tipped the scales in the morning at 167. Gotch looked a few pounds heavier than his given weight, although Charles Olsen, the referee, gave those weights official.

After two minutes of sparring Gotch forced Beell to the mat, but the latter wriggled out of an attempt at the toe-hold like a shot.

Half a dozen times Gotch secured body holds while Beell would wriggle out of in a surprising manner.

They came to their feet with Gotch on the aggressive. With a leg hold he had Beell to the mat again in 10 minutes, and tried a toe hold, which not only failed, but, of course, did not count. Beell got away from his grip and they went to their feet again, with Gotch reaching for Beell's arm. Just as 15 minutes was called Gotch grabbed a leg hold and had Beell down again, and after a terrific effort Beell wriggled out and Gotch rested on long enough to recover, or his mind. He was breathing heavily, while Beell showed that he was still in perfect shape.

After 10 minutes of wrestling Beell went on the aggressive, trying one of Gotch's toe holds, which he let go. Then Gotch went after his rival like a wild animal, and the wrestling was like a lightning. Beell showed wonderful quickness in getting out of the way, and the speedy test netted nothing of advantage to the champion. Gotch forced Beell to a head spin, but he followed his own up and never lost his grip. Beell swung around with his head between Gotch's knees, and getting a grip with the knees on either side of Beell's head. Gotch released the Nelson and forced Beell to a bridge. This bridge Gotch's weight and great strength finally broke, and

The Fall Came in 31 minutes and 22 seconds. There was a great cheer for Gotch as the man left the ring.

Water is the best friend of the skillful cranberry grower, and the arch enemy of the ignorant one.

Apples are advancing in price. It is thought by some that this will tend to make the cranberry market firmer.

Why do berries gathered in the water, and berries put away wet and dried in the cranberry house get wet again while you are cleaning them for market? And even if you dry them again and put them in the sun, why is it they will rot again before they reach their destination?

It would appear from our exchanges that the quantity of berries in the hands of the growers at this date is less than usual, but it is generally believed the trade is now well supplied.

Bacteriology as a science has opened up an immense field for investigation, and it explains thousands of phenomena that were not understood before. One cannot read much now in popular natural science without meeting the word BACTERIA.

Bacteria are microscopic forms of plant life, none of them can be seen with the naked eye, and but few persons therefore have any correct conception of them based on actual observation. Those who have no high power microscope and would like to form some correct notions as to what they are, and how they differ from the common forms of vegetable life, should study the mushrooms, puff-balls, the dead stools that spring out from the sides of decaying trees and stumps. They should then study with a small magnifying glass the mold or mold that may be found on old cheese or bread when kept in a damp place, and if they will conceive of a plant many thousands times smaller than the smallest mildew plant that they can see with the little magnifying glass, they will have a tolerably correct conception of the nature and size of bacteria.

All of these plants differ from other plants in this,—they have no chlorophyll in their composition, no green in any of their parts. They are all white or nearly white. They feed on the decaying tissues of other plants and animals and organic matter and are the active cause of fermentation, decay, and rot. It is now well known that they are the active agents in all the contagious diseases.

The study of bacteria is of interest to the cranberry grower mainly in relation to the part they play in bringing about the decay of his fruit. We make our fruit jars air tight to keep out the bacteria of fermentation. We put salt in meat and we smoke hams to cover them with a slight admixture of crocoto, because salt and crocoto kill bacteria. We dry fruit and we smoke it to preserve them, because bacteria, like other forms of plant life requires moisture for its growth.

Besides moisture, this form of plant life requires heat,—the amount of heat and moisture, is about the same as for mildew and mold.

As explained in a previous article, the greatest force for resisting the bacteria of putrefaction or decay is life itself.

The next greatest force is the injurious skin or bark. Add to those dryness and uniform coolness and you may preserve your fruit in soundness to a ripe old age.
